The globalization of cultural superficiality, forcefully augmented by social media and irresistible commercial interests, has severely tested a depth psychological perspective based on archetypal foundations. Perceptions regarding meaning generally are horizontal, while the vertical axis has melted away with the religions. Therapeutic resources for a time of crisis like ours are thin and insufficient. Client X asks about the meaning of life as she tries to raise a family alone and works as a psychotherapist in a clinic overwhelmed with anxious patients; client Y wonders if he will have a future in fast-moving and ever-changing industry and does not want to bring children into the world as it is; Client Z lives alone in his old age and cannot venture out of his home without paralyzing anxiety about contagious disease or look at his past without a sense of failure and guilt. Does Analytical Psychology offer methods to find meaning for psychological conditions as typical as these in postmodern societies? Training Jungian analysts, psychotherapists, and thinkers today must take up the challenge – to develop a perspective on personal and cultural development (individuation) that pays careful attention to the symbolic and to unconscious movements in the individual and the collective psyche. The Red Book offers a tremendous resource. The main questions to be asked in this lecture are: What is our vision of the well trained Jungian Analyst for today and tomorrow? How can we as teachers and senior analysts guide the training process toward this goal?

Murray Stein, Ph.D., studied as an undergraduate at Yale University (B.A. in English) and attended graduate student at Yale Divinity School (M.Div.) and the University of Chicago (Ph.D. in Religion and Psychological Studies). He trained as a Jungian psychoanalyst at the C.G. Jung-Institut of Zurich. From 1976 to 2003, he was a training analyst at the C.G. Jung Institute of Chicago, of which he was a founding member and President from 1980 to 1985. In 1989, he joined the Executive Committee of the International Association for Analytical Psychology (IAAP) as Honorary Secretary for Dr. Thomas Kirsch as President (1989–1995) and served as President of the IAAP from 2001 to 2004. He was president of the International School of Analytical Psychology (ISAP) in Zurich in 2008–2012 and is presently a training and supervising analyst there. Among his major publications, Jungian Analysis (1982), In Midlife (1983, translated into Italian as Nel mezzo della vita, 2004), Jung's Treatment of Christianity: The Psychotherapy of a Religious Tradition (1985), Psychology of the Divine: Numinosity, Archetype and Symbol (1991), Solar Conscience Lunar Conscience: An Essay on the Psychological Foundations of Morality (1994), Hermes and the Creation of Space (1995), Practicing Wholeness: Analytical Psychology and Jungian Thought (1996), Jung's Map of the Soul: An Introduction (1998), Transformation: Emergence of the Self (1998, translated into Italian as *Trasformazione.
